The Marvellons Growth of Brooklys-What Brooklyn Does Ought to be Bone with an Eye to Its Great Future.

Mayor Chapin of Brooklyn forwarded to the Aldermen yesterday a message setting forth the marvellous growth of Brooklyn, and the possibilities of the future. He starts off with an estimate of the population of the four leading cities in the country, based on recent election figures. He estimates from these figures that the present population of New York is 1,585,529; of Philadelphia, 1,014,332; of Brooklyn, 782,221, and of Chicago, 748,258. From an analysis of the election figures since 1870, he concludes that the average annual gain in population in Brooklyn up to 1880 had been 16,400, and from 1880 to the present time 25,238. He looks upon the opening of the bridge as one of the chief causes of the increasing rate of growth, and that another cause was the opening of the Brooklyn Ele-vated Railroad in 1885.

But a larger cause," the Mayor goes on to say, "is a general change in the relation be-tween New York and Brooklyn, gradually manifesting itself as a necessary result of the development of the whole metropolitan community surrounding the port of New York. The first two causes, therefore, thoush permanent, were auxiliary and specific. The last is a general, continuous condition, whose force seems unlikely to decline, by more likely to at the last of the continuous condition, whose force seems unlikely to decline, by more likely to a first mayor considers that New York and Frocklyn include nearly, if not quite, two-fiths of the population of the whole State.

"As the two cities grow," he adds, "apparently an increasing proportion of that growth must come to Brooklyn. The mere question of area goes far to determine such a result. Each must come to Brooklyn. The mere question of area goes far to determine such a result. Each mile of departure from the New York City Hall emphasizes the inequality in the quantity of residence area Ping respectively unon Marrhal the street for purposes of residence may be said to be well-nigh exhausted. The sucroachments of business below that division line seem likely to diminish its capacity to furnish homes nearly as rapidly as improvements in building methods may augment such capacity. (If the twenty-four Assembly districts in the city on New York and the capacity of the wholly below Fifty-ninth street. In these nineteen districts the innexase of registration in 1885 over that 1884 is 13,641. The remaining five districts lie almost wholly above Fifty-ninth street. Not celly must this comparatively fixed condition of New York during the past four years has been north of Fifty-ninth street. Not celly must this comparatively fixed condition of New York whole we would be growning and the fixed parist the city must rapidly shift from Fifty-ninth street and 10th street; for of the area between Fifty-ninth street and 10th street is to be largely taken by people for residences. Furthermore, the prosence of Central Park causes land east and west to lite to be much sought after, and to command high prices. That part of New York and the former town of New Lots,

The message concludes as follows:

"What is done now, therefore, by way of provision for the Brooklyn of to-day, as well as for the Brooklyn of the future, should be done in a manner besitting the character and needs of a numerous, permanent, and expanding population. Heretofore the public works not less than the private enterprises of our countrymen have often been experimental and insufficient. In public matters the necessity of submitting large propositions to minds not familiar with them has operated to the public disadvantage. Such a project as the Frie Canal or the Brooklyn Bridge is denounced for years as wild and extravagant. When completed its canacity may almost at once be taxed to the utmost. It is now time to recognize that cities like ours are to be the homes of multitudes for successive generations: that the battle of civilization, of progress, and of all that gilds the future with the light of hope must be fought out on this field. Here must be established the broad and sure foundations of systematic provision for those vital daily needs upon whose gratification depend comfort, health, contentment and peace of mind.

"Neither is there now the excuse that resources are not at hand. Our credit is second to that of no existing community; the labor of those owelling among us is not to be surpassed in intelligent and conscientious effectiveness; our frugality has produced at least one good result for the cost of government to the citizen is less than in almost any other city. Comprehensive effort and manly determination alone are needed to begin the task of supplying Brooklyn with what is due to the city and its visible future. This task does not immediately involve any gigantic project. Extraordinary outlay, such as attended the establishment of the Park and the construction of the bridge, need not at once be contemplated. Doubless other bridges will some day be built—and that day may be nearer than some imagine—but I speak now only of such general forms of i

DIGGING IN THE DEPARTMENTS,

-Waiting for Fassett. The Fassett committee adjourned yesterday to await the return of Senator Fassett from New Mexico. It will then have a session at which possibly the Senators will cross-examine each other in private. Yesterday W. P. Mitchell, who has supplied $90,000 worth of printing, stationery, and blank books to the city in the last two years, testified that he went to the departments to find out what their requisitions were, and that he got all the work he could. His friends helped him. Supervisor Costigan was a friend of his. He had never competed in a public bidding for the work.

CAROLIN'S EXTRAORDINARY STORY.

He Says His Wife was Drunk and Killed Herself to Spite Him. The trial of Ferdinand Carolin for the murder of his wife Bridget, in their Stanton street apartments on March 15, will probably end today in the Court of Oyer and Terminer. A woman who lived at 188 Forsyth street. and from the window of her kitchen saw Carolin while he was striking the blows which caused the death of his wife, testified that from her window she looked across the yard into the rear window of the Carolin apartments, and heard somebody scream. She saw a man in the Carolin apartments with an axe in his hand striking something "as if he was strik-

Carolin's statement on the witness stand in his own behalf was a most astounding one. His counsel, Abraham Suydam, had previously stated that the prisoner had told him positively counsel, Abraham Suydam, had previously stated that the prisoner had told him positively that he had not killed his wife, but that ash = sac her own murderer, and as he insisted upon telling the story of the tragedy to the jury, he could not refuse his request.

The accused took his seat in the witness chair and said that in the early part of 1886 he met Bridget McQuade, and they lived together. They were never married, but were recognized as man and wife. He had urged her to be married but she said, "No," as he was a German and she Irish, and he might want to leave her.

"Well, your Honor and gentlemen of the jury," began the prisoner, as he was about to relate the story of the murder, "I will tell you just what happened on that day, when it is charged that I killed my wife."

He was becoming dramatic when his counsel interfered, and suggested that the gravity of the occasion demanded thatine be more calm. The prisoner then stated that after breakfast his wife wanted seven cents to buy some beer, but he would not give it to her. She persisted, and then he called her attention to what he had told her several days before, that after that week he "would go for himself and you go for yourself." She replied that alse would see about that later, he noticed that she had been drinking whiskey, and told her not to get any more beer, because he feared she would make a row if she got drunk. She got the beer, however, and he helped her drink it. The next pint of beer she got she drank by herself. After dinner she got three more pints, which she drank herself.

"She began to quarrel with me," he said, "and told me; This will be the last time I shall ever be drunk; Then she said: 'What's the matter with 'my killing myself?' Then I struck her self, what is the matter with 'my killing myself?' Then I struck her with 'my killing myself?' Then I struck her with 'my killing myself?' Then I struck her with my fist on the right side of the hatchet. She screamed, and about that time he head and struck herself with it. He grabbed he that," and later, "There's a man up stairs killing his wife."

He at last got possession of the hatchet, and placed it in one corner of the room. He decided to call an officer, and put on his coat and hat, As he was about to go out, Bridget stood in the centre of the room with the hatchet in her hand, and dealt herself another blow on the head. She fell senseless, and lay on her back. The detectives appeared and asked him why he had killed her. He replied, "She wanted to kill herself and bring me into trouble."

[The officer's testimony was that he had said. She wanted me to kill her, and I killed her."] Before she struck the second blow she said: "Now I'll kill myself in spite of you."
The prisoner declared the all the witnesses for the prosecution lied in their statements.
The case will go to the jury to-day.

FRATHER MEN ORGANIZE.

Nothing Said in Their Programme About Wages and Working Girls' Unions,

A meeting was held of the feather manufacturers of this city on Saturday afternoon at the Metropolitan Hotel, with a view to forming an association for the mutual advantage of those employed in the manufacture of ostrich and other feathers throughout the United States. The call was signed by manufacturers representing, it is said, eighty per cent, of the entire local trade, including M. J. Taylor & Co. Joseph Kaufmann & Co., Hanson & Green, Stein & Heilbron, Joseph Loewenstein, the Michel. Henry Fatton, and Crane & Co. Mr. Kaufmann, of Joseph Kaufmann & Co. Mr. Kaufmann, of Joseph Kaufmann & Co. took the chair, and Mr. Charles Stewart Davison, the lawyer who represented the manufacturers on the recent proceedings before the State Board of Arbitration, was Secretary. A resolution approving of the formation of an association similar to those which exist in almost all other trades was unanimously passed, and a general discussion as to the objects of such an association ensued.

It was determined to circulate among the manufacturers at large a statement of the general objects of such an association, with a recommendation that it be incorporated for the purposes of acting as a bureau of information for the members, entiting them to confidential reports on the standing of dealers, and also for the purposes of taking joint action in cases of suspicious or fraudulent failures among dealers: of recommending equitable settlements where dealers were unable to meet their obligations in full; of regulating and reducing, if possible, to a uniform rule the custom of dating

Arnold, respectively—and later on Hull consented that $500 should be paid to the widow's lawyer. Mr. Hull has brought a suit in equity to assert his title to the remainder. Old Mrs. Jarvis petitioned the Supreme Court to compel Hull to pay the money in his hands to her. Mr. Hull made an affidavit declaring that he originally held the policy as security for a loan of $5,000 to Mr. Jarvis, and that his services in regard to the collection of the money and the dispute over it were worth $840. Judge Andrews said yesterday that he could not decide the question on the facts submitted, and that a reference might be necessary unless Mrs. Jarvis decided to answer the equity suit and settle the question that way, avoiding any great expense. was put in the hands of the City Chamberlain

The residence of Mrs. John Walton of Ridge-wood, K. J., was entered during her absence a few days ago by burgiars, but while they were ransacking the premises they were scared off. Their exit was so rapid that a colle, which accompanied them, was shut in be-kind the spring door of the rear entrance. The dog was set free the next day and watched, but he did not start anywhere for home, and the conclusion is that the burgiars were not from the neighborhood of Ridgewood. The dog is still in Ridgewood.

ROBBED IN THE CHATHAM BANK.

awyer Emerson Hustled by a Thief, who is Chased and Speedily Run Down. Howard Emerson, a lawyer, of 206 Broadway, went into the Chatham National Bank, at John street and Broadway, shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday to deposit $140. He had $125 in bills and a check for $15 in his bank book.

o'clock yesterday to deposit $140. He had $125 in bills and a check for $15 in his bank book. He was in the line, within a few feet of the receiving teller's window, when a young smooth-faced fellow who had followed him into the bank gave him a violent push, anatched the bank book out of his hand, and, darting out of the bank, fied up the east sidewalk of Broadway. Mr. Emerson started in pursuit, and it is said that the fugitive threatened him with a knife. Detective Nugent of the Old silp station, who was passing, joined in the chase. The thief turned east down the south sidewalk of Fulton street, where Policeman Lake and Detective Nugent caught him.

At the station house the money was found on the prisoner. He had a shock knife in his outer coat pocket, seven cents in money, and several gas burners. He said that his name was James Relly (he afterward said it wasn't), that he was 18 years old, and that he had been tempted to commit the theft by want. He said that he had been lodging in the Windsor Lodging House in the Bowery (he afterward said he hadn't), that his father was a clumber and gas fitter in Philadelphia, and that he only recently arrived in this city from the western part of Pennsylvania. The prisoner wears big silver-framed spectacles. He had on a blue flannel shirt and a neat suit of dark clothing.

HES A PALMER OF DIAMONDS.

Besten Police Want Hollish, Who Was Arrested for the Opium Joint Robbery. The disclosure was made yesterday in Jefferson Market Court that the police of the country have been hunting for nearly a year for John Harkins, alias Hawkins, alias Hollish, the young Bostonian whom Edwin Kennedy accuses of robbing him on Saturday night of $2,300 in an opium joint at 16 Doyers street. He is wanted in Boston for a $3,000 diamond robbery. He was known there as an expert "Dennyweighter," a thief who "palms" diamonds while the salesman is showing them. His confederate in the $3,000 robbery was Nellie Scott, who was convicted and sent to prison for five years.

While Kennedy was making a formal complaint of robbery against the prisoner at Jeferson Market yesterday, a young woman in a red ulster pushed through the crowd and hugged the prisoner. She said she was his wife. Elia Harkins. The detectives were pleased and arranged to have her shadowed. Harkins will be examined on Thursday. The police are looking for Sam Barker and Al Horn, who, Kennedy said, were Harkins's confederates. young Bostonian whom Edwin Kennedy ac-

Forming a Great Brewery Trust

SYRACUSE, Dec. 17 .- There is a stir here among brewing interests, owing to a report that a vast beer trust is to be formed in this country. The assessed valuation of brewery property in this city is $406,000, and the real value is supposed to be about $1.500,000. It was reported this morning that an English syndicate is trying to buy up the brewing interests of the country, and that by selling out to them the breweries in this city would realize $2,000,000. There seems to be no foundation for the second to the morning that the present to the morning that the property of the second to the morning that the property is $2,000,000. There seems to be no foundation for the second to the morning that the property is $2,000,000. 22,00,000. There seems to be no foundation for the report about an English syndicate, but there is definite information that a big brewing trust is forming in this State, if not throughout the country, to be operated by a committee acting for the whole, after the general system of trusts. Beer stock in this city, valued at 1.10 has been sold to-day for three times that price, under the influence of the reports, and agents have been engaged all day in buying in stock from weak holders and those not informed of the deal.

To-day's market was a genuine surprise to the great majority of those who are interested in the course of prices on the Stock Exchange. It reflected much more clearly than it did last week the progress that is being made toward reforming railroad management, especially that of the Granger Trunk lines. President Charles Francis Adams of the Union Pacific furnished evidence of this progress in his adpugned the integrity of Mr. Adams; still the remarkable statements that he made may be regarded as a confession by the railroad Presi dents of the country since he speaks for them as a class, and not one of them dare challenge the truth of his assertions, at least so far as they relate to the low condition of integrity and business morality that prevails among the railroad men of the country.

It is barely possible that Mr. Adams is too severe upon the subordinate officials of the railroads, for the reason that he does not seem to take into account the examples that have been set them by their superiors, and the fact that their superiors have for years tolerated. if indeed they have not openly encouraged, the violation of rate agreements. It is perfectly natural that the employees, for instance, of the Missouri Pacific Railway should pattern their conduct upon that of their chief executive, and, that being the case, is it surprising that they should resort to all manner of disthey should resort to all manner of dishonest devices in the discharge of their duties? The question may also very properly be asked if a high standard of business morality should be expected of the subordinates of the C. B. and Quincy Company, in view of the connection between some of the directors of that corporation and the blackmailing C., B. and Northern road. Other illustrations could be presented, and must readily present themselves to the mind of every Western man who has seen how competitive roads have been constructed without any regard to traffic, and have been made to serve the personal ends of their promoters rather than benefit the stockholders or the community generally.

The public is not likely to be misled in the sonal ends of their promoters rather than benefit the stockholders or the community generally.

The public is not likely to be misled in this matter. A decided reform in the methods of raliroad management is demanded, and the Presidents of the companies will be held responsible if it is not brought about. Bo far as stock brokers are concerned the blame for the present condition of things rests upon the executives, and any effort to shirk merited condemnation upon subordinates will not be permitted. The Presidents have set the pace and their employees have only gauged their iniquity by that of their superiors. For the first time Chicago began to furnish evidence of its knowledge or appreciation of the efforts that are being made to bring the managers of the Granger roads to terms. The news came from that centre that the Presidents of these roads are to meet in this city the latter part of this week to consider means for establishing their competitive business on a permanently better basis. Chicago also discovered that the news printed in The Bun last Thursday that the roads running west from that centre had signed a preliminary agreement to advance and maintain rates Jan. I was not "all rot," as it was characterized in a published despatch on the day mentioned. The Western metropolis furnished substantial evidence of the faith that is in it by buying stocks freely all day, presumably to cover short contracts for account of speculative railroad managers.

The east-bound shipments by rail of dead freight from Chicago last week were the largest in the history of the railronds, aggregating 108,891 tons, against 93,891 tons the previous week, and 50,062 tons the corresponding week of last year. The large tonnage was partially due to the desire of shippers to got their freight under way before the advance in rates that went into effect to-day. This action on the part of shippers would seem to indicate a belief on their part that the railroads propose to exact the new rates, and not cut them.

Old Songs.

With Drawings by EDWIN A. ABBEY and ALFRED PARSONS. With Mounted India Proof Frontispiece, left loose for framing. 4to, Ornamental Leather Cover, Gilt Edges. $7.50. (In a Box.)

Mr. Abbey's collection of "Old Songs," with his own illustrations, is the heliday book of the season, indubi-ably. Mr. Abbey is, in his own domain, easily the first of living artists, and is without rivals who can even seriously contest his pre-eminence. The present collection not only is equal to the best of his former work, but contains some of the best work he has done. . . The charm, the rednement, the distinction of these drawings is altogether inimitable and delightful. . . The total result is a gift book as nearly perfect as we can ever expect to see. -N. Y. Evening Post.

A superb volume. It will make an admirable Christ-mas gift.—Boston Transcript.

Mr. Abbey's illustrations of these Old Songs breathe an abundant sympathy with their spirit. The work of an artist saturated with his subject, a master in pen and-ink designs, charmingly vivacious, versatile, and appreciative. Mr. Parson's head-pieces and tail-pieces are most delicate.—N. Y. Tribune.

An artistic delight of the most genuine and unques-tionable sort.—N. Y. Sun.
